FORTITUDE OF A WOMAN JUST PREVIOUS TO HER EXECUTION .- A woman by the name of Mary Burdock was tried at the Bristol, (Eng.) her guilty, and she was ordered for execution. The following account of the sang froid with Bristol Journal. Such accounts have something in them so mixed up of a fulness and eccentricity, that whilst we shudder we can scarce repress a smile: On quitting the bar, she was taken to the prisoner's room under the Court, when she manifested the most perfect indifference to her situation. She was visited by her relations, including her brother and her children. Seeing them moved by the scene then passing, she desired them to be quiet, "and not to come there to make her low spirited;" and immediately turning to her solicitor, said. "Now let us to business-about the $500 in the bank? They can't hold it, that's all stuff. What will be left for the children, when all the bills are paid?" Her attorney having answered her, she turned quickly round to her brother and said, Mind, Jem, you tax his bill." On being pressed not then to think of this world's concerns, she said, "I must attend to business."-She then called Mrs. Vowles, the matron of the prison, and asked. "Who makes the jail cof-

to her brother and desired him "to get a good strong plain coffin," adding, "but mind you are not to pay more than £2 for it," at the same time moving herself up from the bed, and lifting her eldows, she said, "Mind, it must be full sized, and let it be lined with flannel, and mind that I have a warm comfortable shroud, and don't let the coffin be screwed down too tight; recollect that it must be brought to me this evening-I'll have it put by bed side." Her conduct during the final and awful scene was equally cool. When the hangman was adjusting the rope round her neck, she asked him if he could not "put something soft round! On reaching the platform it rained, and an umbrella was asked for by an officer, for the clergyman, The crimnal being desired by the Governor to move on withhim, she said, "No. I will wait for the umbrella." She was again reminded to proceed, but repeated that she would wait for the umb ella. EDWIN CROSWELL, editor of the Albany Argus, it is rumored, is to have the appointment of Minister to the Russian Court.
